

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An industrial power delivery system configured in a modular architecture and having a plurality of modules. The modules interconnect via digital communication links and exchange data using a digital format. The modularity of the system enables the system to be scaled to vary future content of the product.